

Iceland extends exemption from border restrictions to fully vaccinated non-Schengen visitors

- From 18 March, everyone who can provide proof of a certified vaccination will be allowed to travel to Iceland without being subject to PCR testing and quarantine.
- Visitors who can provide valid evidence of prior infection are also exempt from border measures.
- This exemption will apply to citizens outside the Schengen area, including the UK and USA.

As of 18 March 2021, travelers entering Iceland who have completed vaccination against COVID-19 will be allowed to enter Iceland. Moreover, they will not be subject to border measures, such as testing and quarantine.
